MRS. GEORGE GOULD
The Home-Life at Georgian Court.

One of the most magnificent country houses in the United States is Georgian Court, at the head of the beautiful lake Carasajo, among the tall, straight king pines of Lakewood, N.J., and the wife and mother who makes this palace a home is Mrs. George J. Gould, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Kingdon, formerly of Toronto.

The beautiful Edith Kingdon, after completing her education in England, adopted the stage as a career, and her talent, grace, charm and presence were winning recognition when in 1886 she was married to George Gould, the millionaire railway owner, and son of Jay Gould, at one time America's leading financier. Mrs. Gould soon became one of the most popular of the younger society women of the country and a leader in the world of fashion. Beautiful is the house in which she lives, but far more beautiful is the atmosphere of love, sweetness and companionship that fills the home with sunshine and happiness. It is said that wealth often makes fair favorites of fortune forgetful of the privileges and joys of motherhood, sacrificing on the altar of fashion, time and attention that should be paid to loving watchfulness of the welfare of the children; but Mrs. Gould is a model mother to her seven children, a devoted companion, confident and friend.

The Goulds are practically the only members of the ultra-fashionable set who reside in the country the year round. Georgian Court, built of light gray brick and terra cotta in the style of the French Renaissance, lies in beautiful grounds rendered exclusive by a high fence of wrought iron with bases and interspersed posts of gray stone to match the house. The stables, harmonizing in architecture with the mansion itself, are stocked with horses of every description for the family and guests.

Over the stables is the theatre, a dainty, bijou play-house, complete in every detail, furnished in dark red and gold and seating about one hundred and twenty-five. The Casino, devoted primarily to sport, has a special race-track, a great plunge swimming tank, courts for all games, and about forty bed-rooms and half as many bath-rooms, to be used when a large house-party overtakes the hospitality of the mansion. The Sunken Garden, which is sixty feet in width and 120 in length, is floored and walled with flawless marble, and fine sculpture peeping from a dark background of evergreen shrubs and bushes, is reflected in the clear waters of a lagoon. Near by, too, is the wonderful electric fountain, sixty feet in diameter, of white marble; the centre piece consisting of a colossal Nautilus shell of bronze, forming a chariot on which stands the heroic statue of a man driving a pair of purple marble sea-horses.

Oscar Eskew Sells Interest In Eskew & Hicklins Livery Barn to Geo. Foster

The many friends of Oscar Eskew were surprised this week when the news was flashed over town that he had sold his interest in the large livery barn of Eskew & Hicklin, to his genial, clever rival, Geo. Foster who already owns the barn on Main street.

These two stables have, since these gentlemen owned them, been recognized as the two leading livery barns in this end of the state, and while the people are loth to give up so clever and courteous a gentleman as Mr. Eskew, there is not one spark of regret that Mr. Foster is to be his successor. In losing Mr. Eskew we feel to have lost a man who has tried as faithfully as any man could to please and serve the public. But just as sure are they that Mr. Foster will equally care for them. Mr. Hicklin will care for the Salem street stable, while Mr. Foster will rule at the one on Main street.

It will be to your interest to see Dr. Dr. Crawford before having your dental work. Up stairs in Marion Bank building.

Morris & Travis, and Weldon & Hina Grocery Company is Now
Morris-Hina Grocery Co.

A surprise sprung on the citizens was the consolidation of the Morris & Travis Grocery Company yesterday with the Weldon-Hina Grocery Co., under the new firm name of Morris-Hina Grocery Company and the business to be conducted at the Weldon-Hina stand on Main street, Mr. Morris having bought out his partner, Mr. Albert Travis and Mr. C. E. Weldon interested in the other firm and Mr. Hina buying sufficient interest in the Morris firm to make them share equal.

The same clerks of both firms went as fixtures and will be retained.

This makes one of the strongest business firms in Marion and with the number of friends to the list of both gentlemen it is but natural to say that a prosperous career will be their.

THE RECORD-PRESS PRIZE CONTEST

Closed Saturday Afternoon at 6 O'clock—Mrs. J. E. Glass Proving the Winner

The Record-Press Prize Contest came to a successful close Saturday afternoon at 6 o'clock. Just as the town clock commenced to strike the hour of six Senator P. S. Maxwell took the ballot boxes in charge and had them conveyed to his office, when, after supper, the judges, Senator Maxwell, J. H. Orme and J. D. Asher, made the count, that they were able to announce at 9:30 o'clock with the following result.

First Prize, Fine Piano won by Mrs. J. E. Glass 2,021,830

Second Prize, a $15.00 Ladies cloak given by Yandell-Gugenheim Co., won by Miss Addie Maynard 1,637,965

The work done by the two leading contestants has never been equaled. They worked early and late every day. It is said of Miss Maynard that as a solicitor she has never had her equal. Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour she came into the judges quarters after the count and though defeated for the grand prize, thanked them for the fair count and all the trouble they had been put to during the contest. She is a model little lady and worth her weight in gold.

A GOOD MEETING

Rev. U. G. Hughes our pastor at Seven Springs commenced a revival meeting at this place on Monday night Oct. 17, and continued 12 days and a glorious revival it was. Bro. Hughes had no ministerial help at all. Bro. Elder Griffith led the vocal music. The result of this meeting 12 professions of faith in Christ, and eleven of them united with the church and were baptized last Sunday.

Bro. Hughes preached 24 soul stirring sermons and it seemed to reach the hearts of the unconverted for when he would give an opportunity for penitents they would just come flocking to the anxious seat. And I don't believe there was a Christian that attended those services that did not feel the presence of the Holy Spirit. During the services Bro. Griffith sung with the spirit and we feel like he was a powerful help in the meeting.

Dr. Crawford gives a guarantee on all dental work. Take advantage of the opportunity to save money for yourself and family.

DEDICATION OF BAPTIST CHURCH

More Money Raised Than was Needed to Clear This Pretty Church of Debt

One of the most successful church dedications the Record-Press ever heard of happened at Salem, Livingston county, Sunday October 23rd. There have been several church organizations in Salem for many years and among the number a Baptist organization. These organizations have a union church building and several of the churches have felt that it would be best if they could have a building of their own. The Baptist finally determined to try to attain this end: There is nothing accomplished in this world without trying and having some little money and a great deal of determination and pure grit, this handful of Baptist undertook the task of building a building. The details of struggle and hard work performed in the building of this house of worship will probably never be written. Up to Sunday October 23rd the property represented an expenditure of about $2,400. Of this sum there was $700.00 yet to be paid. That date was fixed upon as the dedication day and of course there was only one man in Kentucky that could dedicate this building and pull it out of the slough of debt, Dr. Powell of Louisville.

The long trying siege, the hopes and fears of this little handful of Baptists had so worked on their nerves that some of them were fearful that this debt of $700.00 could not be raised. Of course all this was in their minds, only. It had no basis in fact. Those of us who had witnessed Dr. Powell's splendid dedicatory service here in Marion knew that he would not fail at Salem. The truth is, years ago Dr. Powell opened his unabridged dictionary turned to that word "failure" and deliberately scratched it out. He has no use for it. His dictionary is complete for him without that word.

Sunday October 23rd was a beautiful day. Quite a number of Marion people were on the road early bound for Salem. Among the number were noticed Misses Ruby James, Leaffa Wilborn, Nina Barnes, Della Barnes, Nellie Sutherland and Ethel Boaz, Mr. and Mrs. John Sutherland, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Pierce, Mrs. Florence Yandell. The Salem people of all denominations and all tribes and of no tribe at all put their shoulders to the wheel to see that no one came to Salem that day and went away hungry. It would be no exaggeration to say that five times as many people would have been cared for bountifully. Great baskets and hampers of the best the Salem valley affords were unloaded on the church lot and then in addition there were barbecued six sheep and four hogs. It was a great feast. One Methodist lady declared she was actually ashamed of herself and said to a poor Presbyterian, "Do you suppose these Salem people will think I never had anything to eat in my life before?"

Dr. Powell's sermon was splendid. His original methods in money raising and his strong appeals were a revelation. The seating of the women on one side of the house and the men on the other side and the declaration

FAMOUS PEOPLE

BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

The Peerless Poet.

THERE are some poets—like Milton—we look up to with awe, so reverent are we that we do not approach their sacred work near enough to read a line of it; others—like Browning—whose beautiful thoughts we accept as pearls for which we must dive bravely through a sea of words to capture them; others—like James Whitcomb Riley—we regard with tender affection, feeling we see his soul in his words, ever sweet, simple, sincere and sympathetic. His writings seem autobiographic, not merely of Riley but of the unspotted part of all human nature. The closer a poet writes to the heart of the people, the more fully is the heart of the poet revealed.

In the little village of Greenfield, Ind., where he was born about fifty-four years ago, the son of a Quaker lawyer, he went to school. He did not satisfy the ambitious hopes of his father; he did not take much stock in education; he always stood far down the line in his class; he wanted to be out in the open, swimming near old Kinsey's mills, watching the flight of the birds, learning the trees and the flowers, getting nearer to Nature, absorbing without knowing it all that his heart hungered for and expressing it in pictures and in simple verses he could not help writing. The largest vein in Riley's body is his vein of sentiment and it was raining tone and strength in those days, when he was only a yellow-haired, untidy, fun-loving boy.

He ran away from law books one day, to follow a patent medicine peddler who had a wonderful cart which he drove through the country. He was away about a year, painting advertising signs on the fences to exalt the fame of his patron and then he went home and with three rollicking, madcap fellows like himself, spent three or four years traveling through the State, as tramp painters.

The verse habit was growing on him in the meanwhile and he secured a position on a weekly paper at Anderson, where his first poems appeared. His poem, "Locaine," paraded as a discovery of an unknown poem by Edgar Allan Poe, deceived the ablest literary critics and made him famous and notorious; but it brought him before the public and started him on his wondrously successful career.

Dialect is but one instrument in Riley's hand, it does not contain all his music; for some of his beautiful sonnets and other poems which should give him a worthy place as poet, if he had written nothing else, have no trace of the vernacular of rural Indiana.

that it would cost every man that gave his seat to a lady, five dollars, were simply parts of a deep laid plot.

It all worked out nicely. Dr. Powell was at his best. He swayed his audience from laughter to tears at will. It is a well known psychological truth that laughter and tears are the two most potent forces for unsnapping unwilling pocket books. They unsnapped that day quickly. Sometimes it seemed almost too quickly if that were possible. Mr. Zed Bennett, the Doctors very efficient Secretary, had hard work at times to keep track of the offerings. Mr. Bennett did well though even if he did carry off a borrowed lead pencil. As everything seemed to be for the good of the order that day, and good humor and brotherly feeling floated in the air, the owner of the pencil said never a word.

Dr. Powell made only one mistake during the whole day. The debt to be raised was $700. After the offerings totaled something like $730 the Doctor asked the Secretary what the amount was. He had no idea that it was that much or he would not have asked the question. But the answer was immediately lost in the fog for he did not pay any attention to the figures at all but kept right on with the same speed and when they finally rounded up the total of the offerings was $843.43. It was certainly a splendid showing. Some of the Salem members laughed for joy while others cried for the same reason. One of the most remarkable features of the whole collection was the cash feature. Nearly every subscription was paid on the spot.

Another of the enjoyable features of this gathering was the singing. Mr. Barnes the author and singing evangelist led this part of the service. We noticed in the choir, Mr. Grace Barnes and his two sons, Miss Fleta Barnes, Miss Gray, Miss Farris, Mr. E. L. Franklin, Prof. Sutherland and others. The singing was certainly grand and soul inspiring. The success of the singing could not have been otherwise. Wherever there are a few Barnes collected together there is sure to be a good singing. It is born in the bone and bred in the muscles of throats to sing and they are like Dr. Powell's darkey that reached for the rooster, they can't help it.

October 23rd 1910 will ever be remembered by the little Baptist church at Salem. It was a glorious day. It was a splendid service. It was a financial success. Nothing but good feeling, prevailed and to the noble people of Salem who tried so hard that these things might be we say, God bless you all.

for training the pupils in thoughtful ways of life. The teacher must plan the lesson, know where the children will need help, whether the lesson calls for inductive or deductive study, whether the book offers sufficient data or whether it must be supplemented, what organization is possible or advisable, what parts she wants memorized, and the main point she thinks should be impressed on the children's minds.

Thus, we see that in order to teach the children to study systematically the teacher must know well her subject matter. Possessing a knowledge of the children's environment, and being familiar with the subject matter are foundations to the third point. That the teacher must be able to direct the various steps involved in the children's mastery of their lessons. When a child gives the reign to fancy, and lets his thoughts wonder where they will, his thinking is of the spontaneous kind; but when he sets himself by the directions of his teacher to accomplish some task, to solve some problem or to find the way out of some difficulty, he controls his thoughts and chooses or rejects the ideas which come into consciousness, taking as a basis of his choice the bearing which these ideas have upon the end he is trying to reach. In each recitation the teacher should arouse expectation and desire which are diverted to unknown objects. Rightly valued and employed, curiosity may be made a valuable agent in teaching. To get the children to study much may be done to arouse their feelings. Some teachers threaten various unpleasant consequences which will be visited upon those who do not complete their work in a certain manner, and at a certain time. The children in order to avoid these consequences bond their unwilling energies to their work and master it. This is not a good way to get children to study. A better way is to make them sure that what you wish to study will be useful to them, that it bears upon some felt need, whether of his own or of the society in which he is interested. This appeal should especially be made to the larger pupils. A teacher who frightens her class who is too serious, or who is sarcastic will not be able to make much progress in training her class to study, since her attitude retards rather than advances. Frankness, fairness, the spirit of co-operation and encouragement are better and will cause the children to respond gladly, and create a friendly relation between teacher and pupils.

The teacher should begin to teach the children to study logically as soon as they enter school. They do not know what studying means, and they should be trained to study logically without consciousness to the method; as they grow older they may become conscious of the effort that they may direct their own studying. In the primary grades the process of training may begin in the oral lessons in literature, reading arithmetic, and nature study, on any subject being taught. If it is a literature lesson the teacher should read the poem—if it is a poem to be taught carefully to them, tell them that it is a word picture, and talk to them about the scene and read it again and have them to image the scene; then she will teach the poem line or stanza at a time until each can repeat it understandingly. By doing this she will be teaching them to study literature logically and when they become older they can interpret literature independently. If the lesson is a nature study lesson about birds, she can show them pictures of birds in their own neighborhood, talk about their color, habit use, and tell them to observe the birds as they come or return from school, or better go with them into the woods and observe with them, teaching them the while to study systematically. In arithmetic, the children should be taught numbers in relation to object, the teacher must let them do work with the yard stick, rule and quart measures. Other lessons in the primary grades should be taught in this way that the child may learn to study systematically. All the lesson should be adapted to the pupils. It is a well known law of the human mind that in learning we proceed from the known to the related unknown. Too long lessons are harmful, and teachers should not undertake too much in one lesson to attempt too much is to fail in every thing. In their "busy work" the children should be trained to work quickly and accurately. She can do this by holding the children responsible for their work, praising those who have followed her instructions, and have results of good as she thinks they should be.

What has been about primary grades can be carried on into the intermediate grades. As the children advance they must learn to work more independent, as this is the very core of the art of study. Before the children reach the intermediate grades they have had some written assignments, and are ready to do systematic work. In assigning these lessons it is not enough for the children to be told to get a certain number of pages, but the teacher should prepare the class for right study. She should find out where help is needed, and all points of difficulty should be set in proper light. If the text-book does not contain the data needed, she must tell the children where they can find it. There should be an assignment and a report of the class in a future recitation. This explanation will not take many minutes of the teacher's time, and the children will know what is expected of them, and how to study their lessons logically. In the recitation the children meet the teacher to report what they have learned. The thoughtful teacher will let them answer all the questions, decide whether the points they are considering bear upon the subject, and make all the summarise and outlines. She will correct them when necessary, and explain points they do not understand. By a systematic recitation the children learn to study logically.

Children must have freedom to consult maps, books and charts. They should be required to do observation work, make experiments and report the same to the teacher. Children will never become independent workers unless they work independently. If they pass from grade to grade, they can pursue their studies systematically. LULA B. WHEELER.

Believes Government Should Generally Be Leader in Conservation.

SAD EXPERIENCE IN EAST

Addressing Public Meeting In Denver
Ex-President Discusses Water Power
er, Coal Lands, Ranges and Forests —Powerful Plea for Conservation.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 29.—Colonel Roosevelt arrived in Denver from Cheyenne this morning, and after a parade in which representatives of the state and city, the Live Stock association and the Spanish War Veterans took part, was the guest of the Denver Press club at a cowboy luncheon at Overland park. In the afternoon he delivered a public address at the Auditorium and later spoke to the Spanish War Veterans, and then he was the guest of honor at a "round up" dinner at Eljebel Temple.

Talks on Conservation.
Mr. Roosevelt's main address was on conservation, and was as follows

This country has shown definite signs of waking up to the absolute necessity of handling its natural resources with foresight and common sense. The first place, the waste of the land in the first place, the needless waste of the natural resources must be stopped. It is rapidly becoming a well-settled policy of this people that we of this generation hold the land in part for the use of our own selfish enjoyment, just as the farmer is a good citizen if he leaves his farm improved and not impaired for his children, and a bad citizen if he skins the land in his own selfish interest, so the Nation is a good citizen if it leaves the natural resources as assets which it must turn over to the next generation increased and not impaired in value, and behaves badly if it leaves the land poorer to those who come after us.

In the second place, the conservation movement must be developed promptly and completely, and in orderly fashion. It is not conservation to leave the natural resources undeveloped. Development is a indispensable part of the conservation plan. The conservation movement is not for the forests, and the land itself, must all be put to use. Those who assert that conservation proposes to tie them up, depriving this generation of their benefits in order to hand them on untouched to the next generation, are not conservationists. The conservation idea. The conservation does not mean depriving the men of today of the natural rights in the natural resources of the land. All it means is that we of this generation shall so use our rights as not to deprive the next generation of their natural rights in their turn.

In the third place, so far as possible these resources must be kept for the whole people and not handed over for exploitation to single individuals. The enterprise must be organized so that the enterprise by unwisely diminishing the rewards for that enterprise. On the contrary, we believe that the men of exceptional abilities should have exceptional rewards. The point where the reward becomes disproportionate to the service, up to the point where the abilities are used to the detriment of the people as a whole. Beyond this point the reward is excessive and beyond the point where it becomes inconsistent with the welfare of the community. Thus our consistent attitude is to favor the actual needs of the man who has so much to the public domain, we have to much to cultivate, and he makes a permanent home for his children who come after him; but we are against the reward, no matter how large, which tends to monopolize large masses of public land.

Now, to preserve the general welfare, to see to it that the rights of the nation are protected, and the liberty of the individual secured, it is necessary to be consistent with this welfare, and only when it becomes inconsistent therewith, necessary to invade the right of the individual. It is a public interest that the individual can't get his rights back from the states that is where it exists. The federal rights helps to secure that the individual to those I believe that the states have, there are no states that are where the individual is not under the federal government will suffer the rights of the individual and where this is the case, the individual and a state are in the state of the individual. The individual, the business of the individual, is no longer an affair of any private business has become national and the state effectively way of controlling the individual and the state is to be in connection with it. It is by having the people nationalize this control in order to prevent their being exploited by the individuals who have nationalized the business of the individual and the state is to be in connection with it. It is by having the government to have a control over the foreign commerce, and until this fact is fully acknowledged and acted upon

In the matter of conservation, I heartily approve of state action where under our form of government the state, and the state only, has the power to act. I cordially join with those who desire to let the state, within its own sphere, take the most advanced position in regard to the whole matter of conservation. I have taken exactly this attitude in my own state of New York. Where the state alone had power to act, I have done all I could.

to get it to get in the most advanced manner; and where the Nation could not have done all it could to get the action in the same direction. Unfortunately, in the east we have in this matter paid the penalty of not having our foreign land under National control; and the penalty has been severe. Most of the states—although they are old states—have protected their forests, each failing to act by itself, because the action was really the common concern of all; and where action is the common concern of all, experience has shown that it can only profitably undertaken by the National government.

As a result of the impossibility of such governments in the east, we are doing our best to get National legislation upon which the National government, at an expense of millions of dollars, shall undertake to build a road from the Blue and White Mountains of the east where it is now doing in the Rock Mountains here west. It would be both a calamity and an absurdity for the National government now to do in the west the thing that at a heavy pecuniary cost it is doing in the east. By such a practice in the east we have founded our cost that the Nation, and the several states, can best guard the interests of the people in the matter of the for-and the waters, and that if it fails to attempt this duty at the outset it will later on have to pay heavily in order to be allowed to take up the work, which because it is done so late, cannot be so well done as if it had been begun earlier.

Water Power.

Take the question of the control of the water power sites. The enormous importance of water power sites to the future industrial development of this country has only been realized within a very few years. Formerly, the realization has come too late as regards many of the power sites; but many yet remain with which our hands are free to deal. We should make it our duty to see that hereafter the power sites shall be under control of the general government, for the use of the people as a whole. The fee should remain with the people as a whole, while the use is leased on terms which shall secure an ample return to the public. We shall encourage the development and use of the water power, but which shall not create a permanent monopoly or permit the development to be antagonistic, to be in any respect hostile to the public interest. This is the power to do this effectively, and it is for this reason that you will find those corporations which wish to gain improper advantage and to be freed from efficient control on the part of the public, doing all they can to delay to the exclusion of the state for National action.

There is something fairly comic in the appeal made by many of these men in favor of state control when you realize that the great corporations seeking the privilege of developing these water power sites are men who are at least as apt to be owned outside that state as within it. In this country, nowadays, capital has a National and not a state use. The great corporations which are the major and largely owned in the older states are those which are engaged in the developing and using the mines and water powers and forests of the new territories and the new states, from Alaska to Arizona. I have been genuinely amused during the past two months at having arguments made by these men and their rich men from New York and Ohio, for instance, as to why Colorado and other Rocky Mountain states should manage their own water power sites. Now these men may be good citizens according to their lights, but no sane and sensible public interest obscures their object of the public need; and as their object is to escape an efficient control, exercised in the interest of all the people of the country, they clamor to be put under the state instead of under the Nation. If we are to have enough of the process of requests we shall have ourselves to blame when we wake up to find that what we have permitted another privilege to intrench itself and another portion of what should be kept for the public good to be turned over to individuals for the process of private enrichment. During the last session of congress bills were introduced to transfer the water power sites in the National Forests and the Public Domain to the control of the states. I cannot state too strongly my opposition to such a measure, and I am unwise, and that it would be disastrous to enact them into law. In substance their effect would be to free these great special interests from all effective control. The passage of such a bill would mean a very big step toward the surrender of the general welfare, and a long backward step down the bill of progress we have of late been climbing.

Our people have for many years proceeded upon the assumption that the Nation should control the public land. It is to this assumption of National outlook that we owe our wisest land legislation, from the Homestead Law to the Irrigation Law. The wise use of our public domain has always been conditioned upon National action. The states can greatly help, but the Nation must take the lead, as regards the land, as regards the forests and waters; and perhaps peculiarly in the case of the waters, because almost all streams are really inter-state streams.

The same principle applies with peculiar force to the coal lands, and especially to the coal lands in Alaska, whose protection and ownership by the Federal government is so necessary, both for full and free industrial development in the west, and for the needs of our fleet in the Pacific. The coal mines should be leased, owned, and those who mine the coal should pay back part of the profit to the people. It is the right and duty of the people to demand the most vigilant trusteeship on that part of that branch of the Federal government in charge of the fuel resources of the United States.

Remember also that many of the men who protest loudly against effective national action would be the first to protest if such action were taken. If such action in its turn became effective, and would then unhesitatingly invoke the law to show that the state had no constitutional power to act. Long experience has shown that the people are not without a sense of constitutional doubt, to set one set of judicial decisions which render it difficult for the nation to act, and another set which render it impossible for the state to act. In each case the people are left in a quandary, and invoke the aid of those who treat the Constitution, not as a healthy aid to growth, but as a fetish to prevent growth; and caution the advocates of wise and cautious processes as being the only way to save the Constitution. I have said before, I am a strong believer in efficient national action, where such action offers the best hope of securing and protecting the interest of the whole people and the nation as a whole. But am emphatically in favor of state action, where state action will best serve this purpose; and I am no less emphatically in favor of cordial and hearty co-operation between the national and the state authorities, to deal with the national and state duties, and to prevent overland.

If there is one thing which is more unwise than another, it is the creation by legislative, by executive, or judicial action of a neutral ground in which neither the state nor the nation has power, and which can serve as a place of refuge for the lawless man or woman, and especially for the lawless man or woman who can hire the best legal counsel to advise him how to keep his abiding place equally distant from the uncertain frontiers of both state and national power.

I am here at the invitation of the Colorado Livestock association, and desire to express my appreciation of their steadfast support for dendency in the proper handling of public lands and national forests. They have met and overcome the unrelenting opposition of some of the most influential stockmen of the state; they have proved that they have been right. I want to express also my appreciation of the work of the American National Livestock association. It has been one of the really important factors in the development of the federal railway regulation, while it support of the policy of federal range control has given it a large place in national affairs. As an old-time stockman, I am calling attention to a few things on the open range cannot continue, and that the sure way to protect the range itself, prevent the increase of big outfits, promote the equitable use of the range, and encourage the true genuine homestead settlement, is to extend over the open range a system of range control somewhat similar to that now in effect on the national forest lands.

Whatever system of range control may be adopted in detail, there are two things it must not do. It must not handicap or exclude the small man by requiring him to spend more money for fences than he can afford, and it must leave every acre that can be settled by bona-fide homesteaders freely open to such settlement.

I do not believe that a single acre of our public lands should hereafter pass into private ownership except for the benefit of the people. I am not a homesteader and I know that the stockmen understand with me in their desire to remove every obstacle from the path of the genuine homesteader, and to put every possible man who tries to get public lands by misrepresentation or fraud. This is absolutely necessary on the agricultural lands. It is at least equally necessary on the mineral lands. The effect on the citizen whose baneful effect on the average citizen we can scarcely exaggerate, if the great stores of coal and other mineral fuels still owned by the people in Alaska and the United States should pass into unregulated ownership of monopolistic corporations.

You progressive stockmen have stood heartily by the conservation movement, and with you have stood many of the nation's leading business men. A large credit is due, such as the lumbermen in Washington and Oregon, the irrigators in California, and the supporters of the country life movement in the arid States. I want to make my acknowledgments in particular to the Colorado Forestry association, which has supported the forest work of the government with such unselfish zeal. The forest service has been successful because it is effective. Some of its best work has been met by the bitterest opposition. For example, it has done a real service by blocking the road against the grabbers of water rights. It has stood up for the public stock against the demands of horrid mining concerns to exploit the national forests. I have always done my best to help the genuine miner. I believe in the right of the miner to work on public lands, but it is equally important to enforce the law firmly against that particularly dangerous class which makes its living off the public lands through fraudulent mining schemes.

Much of the opposition to the forest conservation, like much of the opposition to conservation, takes the form of direct misrepresentation. For example, the Secretary is often heard that the national forests are "closed areas" where "no one is allowed to go, and which are thus put beyond the reach of settlement. This statement seems plausible only till the facts are known. In the first place, Congress has specially provided that whenever agricultural land there may be an agricultural interest, the proper authorities proper safeguards, to homestead settlement. And in the second place, whenever the opponents of conservation are asked to point out the great stretches of enclosed agricultural land on the national ground and in the presence of experienced men of in speeches in a hall, they fail.

The National Irrigation Congress is to hold a session in the city of Pueblo late in September. I am keenly sorry that I could not have accepted the invitation to be present. I must, however, be in the East at that time. But this congress is one of the most important I have ever known, long-held, and deep-felt interest in the reclamation of arid lands by the federal government, and I desire to do so now. There is no more effective instrument for the making of homes than the United States Reclamation Service, and no government bureau while I was President had reached a higher standard of efficiency, integrity and devotion to the public welfare.

Like the Forest Service, the Reclamation Service has clashed with certain private interests, and has had to pay the penalty of its service to the public in the form of bitter opposition from those with whom it has come in contact. The question has been raised against it that the government must not do for its citizens at less cost than private interests are ready to make them pay for at higher prices. Now, I believe fully in the private do as you would be done by motto, but the government cannot undertake. There is a large and legitimate field for such work. But the essential thing is to make home on the lands, not to enable individuals to profit from the necessities of the men who make these homes. There is no need of the government obtaining the reclamation of arid lands by the government that there would be to protest against the government for patenting agricultural lands directly to the actual settler, instead of through a middleman, who could then pass them on to the settler. The men who settle themselves at the cost of the community instead of by service to the community we have always had with us, and doubtless we always shall. But there is no reason why we should yield to men like the Trusts, or the Standard Oil Company, and the Pullman Co. The chief reason for the attacks upon it.

I don't think that there is one among you who is a better and more thoroughgoing westerner than I am. There has been no support given to the conservation policies so welcome as that which came from the west, and none in the west more welcome than that which came from Colorado. There are men and organizations in Colorado, and I mention Delta in particular, whose support of conservation policies is the greatest given to the Nation. It has not always been an easy thing for them to stand for what was right, to stand for the real ultimate good as against the seeming temporary good; but they have stood for it steadily nevertheless.

From the standpoint of conservatism the east has wasted much of its own superb endowment; and as an American as a lover of the west, I hope that the west will profit by the mistakes of the east. The east has wasted its resources, it suffers from the effect of the waste, which now puts it at a disadvantage compared to the west, and it is sorry. Most of the capital and very many of the men now attempting to develop the west are westerners, and from the east. The west should learn the lesson of the east's mistakes, and should remember that conservation of the west will help the west first and most, and that the movement for conservation is most earnest, most vigorous and most effective in the west and among western men. That is one strong reason why the conservation policy has come to stay.

The political rechristening of street in Paris is outdone by the case of the Island of Reunion, which changed its name four times in just over half a century. In 1793 it was Bourbon, but it had been for a century and a half before the convention then changed it to Reunion. Under the empire it became Ile Bonaparte, at the restoration it reverted to Bourbon, and finally, in 1848, it became Reunion once more. So the septuagenarian islanders of this last year could recall an unparalleled series of compulsive changes. They must have thought themselves lucky a few years later when the second empire refrained from Bonapartizing this island again.

CONSERVATION IS PATRIOTIC DUTY

Roosevelt at St. Paul Advocates New Methods.

WASTE AND MONOPOLY WRONG

Waterways and Forests Discussed—State and Federal Control—Country Life Institute Is Favored.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 6.—Theodore Roosevelt was the central figure in the conservation congress today, and delivered an address that called forth the warmest praise of those who were fortunate enough to hear it. The fact that the former president was to speak attracted to the convention hall a tremendous crowd, and the man who has made conservation one of the chief issues in the United States was given the heartiest kind of a greeting.

Taking "National Efficiency" for his general subject, Mr. Roosevelt said: America's reputation for efficiency stands deservedly high throughout the world. We are efficient probably to the full limit that any nation can attain by the methods hitherto used. There is good reason to be proud of our achievements, and yet no reason to believe that we cannot excel our past. There is practically unrestrained individualism. We have reached a pitch of literally unexampled material prosperity, although the distribution of this prosperity leaves much to be desired from the standpoint of justice and fair dealing. But we have not only allowed the individual a free hand, which was in the main right; we have also allowed great corporations to act as though they were individuals, and to exercise the rights of individuals, in addition to using the vast combined power of high organization and enormous wealth for their own advantage. This development of corporate action, it is true, doubtless has in large part been responsible for the gigantic development of our natural resources, but it is not less responsible for waste, destruction, and monopoly on an equally gigantic scale.

The method of reckless and uncontrolled private use and waste has done for us all the good it ever can, and it is time to put an end to it before it does all the evil it easily may. We have passed the time when heedless waste and destruction, and arrogant monopoly, are any longer permissible. Hereafter we must seek National efficiency by a new and a better way, by the way of the orderly development and use, coupled with the preservation, of our natural resources by making the most of what we have for the benefit of all of us, instead of leaving the sources of material prosperity open to indiscriminate exploitation. These are some of the reasons why it is wise that we should abandon the old point of view, and why conservation has become a patriotic duty.

Waterways Development. One of the greatest of our conservation problems is the wise and prompt development and use of the waterways of this Nation. The Twin Cities, lying as they do at the headwaters of the Mississippi, are not upon the direct line of the proposed lakes to the gulf deep waterway. Yet they are deeply interested in its prompt completion, as well as in the deepening and regulation of the Mississippi to the mouth of the Missouri and to the gulf. The project for a great trunk waterway, as the one of the sea, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes, should not be abandoned. The lakes to the gulf deep waterway, and the development of the rivers which flow into it, should be pushed to completion vigorously and without delay.

In nearly every river city from St. Paul to the gulf, the water-front is controlled by the railroads. Nearly every artificial waterway in the United States, either directly or indirectly, is under the same control. It goes without saying that unless the people prevent it in advance, the railroads will attempt to take control of our waterways as fast as they are improved and completed; nor would I blame them, if we, the people, are supine in the matter. We must see to it that adequate terminals are provided in every city and town on every improved waterway. Terminals open under reasonable conditions to the use of every citizen, and rigidly protected against monopoly; and we must compel the railroads to co-operate with the waterways continuously, effectively, and under reasonable conditions. Unless we do so, the railroads will refuse to deliver freight to the boat lines, either openly or by imposing prohibitory conditions, and the waterways once improved will do comparatively little for the benefit of the people who use them.

Adequate terminals properly controlled and open through lines by rail and boat are two absolutely essential conditions to the usefulness of inland waterway development. I believe furthermore that the railroads should be prohibited from owning, controlling, or carrying any interest in the boat lines on our rivers, unless under the strictest regulation and control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, so that the shippers' interests may be fully protected.

The National Forests. If any proof were needed that forest protection is a National duty, the recent destruction of forests in the west by fire would supply it. Even with the aid of the army added to that of the forest service the loss has been severe. Without either it would have been vastly greater.

But the forest service does more than protect the National forests against fire. It makes them more useful and increasingly so. During the last year for which I have the figures the National forests were used by 22,000 cottagers with their boats, 5,000 fishermen with their boats, 100,000 hunters with their guns, and 100,000 others for other special purposes. Nearly 20,000 settlers had the use of the land. The total resident population of the National forests is about a quarter of a million, which is more than the population of certain states. More than 700,000 acres of agricultural land have been patented or leased to the forest service, and the number of the forest officers show that more than 100,000 people a year use the forests for recreation, camping, hunting, fishing, and similar purposes. All this is done, of course, without injury to the timber, which has a value of at least a thousand million dollars. Moreover, the National forests protect the water supply of a thousand cities and towns, and 800 irrigation projects, and more than 300 power projects, not counting the use of water for these and other purposes by individual settlers.

Country Life Institute. The investigations of the Country Life Commission have led the farmers of this country to realize that they have not been getting their fair share of progress and all that it brings. Some of our farming communities in the Mississippi valley and in the middle west have made marvelous progress, yet even the best of them, like communities of every other kind, are not beyond improvement, while much needs to be done in some other sections to improve country life. As yet we know comparatively little of the basic facts of rural civilization. The means for better farming we have studied with care, but to better living on the farm and to better business on the farm the farmers themselves have given scant attention. One of the most urgent needs of our civilization is that the farmers themselves should undertake to get for themselves a better knowledge along these lines, and then to apply it. Sir Horace Plunkett, for many years a Wyoming cattleman, and now doing himself in Ireland to the country life problem there, has suggested in his recent book on the "Country Life Problem in America" the creation of a Country Life Institute as a center where the work and knowledge of the whole world concerning country life may be brought together for the use of every nation. I am strongly in sympathy with this idea, and I hope to see it carried out with the co-operation and assistance of our own people. Last spring, while visiting the capital of Hungary, Buda-Pesth, I was immensely impressed by the Museum of Country Life, containing an extraordinary series of studies in agriculture, in stock-raising, in forestry, in mining; the exhibits were of the utmost practical importance and were also intensely interesting and instructive.

As a people we have not yet learned to economize. One of the virtues we Americans most need is thrift. It is a mere truism to say that luxury and extravagance are not good for a Nation. So far as they affect character, the loss they cause may be beyond computation. But in the material sense the loss is less, greater than is caused by both extravagance and luxury put together. I mean the needless, useless, and excessive loss to our people from premature death and avoidable diseases. Wholly apart from the grief, the suffering, and the waste of each year has been calculated at nearly twice what it costs to run the Federal government. In addition to the state and city health officers and organizations, there is urgently needed a Federal bureau of health, to act, so far as the National government properly may, to relieve our people from this dreadful burden.

National Conservation Commission.

One of the most important meetings in our recent history was that of the governors in the white house in May, 1908, to consider the conservation question. By the advice of the governors the meeting was followed by the appointment of a National conservation commission. The meeting of the governors directed the attention of the country to conservation as nothing else could have done, while the work of the commission has been the movement definiteness and supplied it with a practical program. But at the moment when the commission was ready to begin the campaign for putting its program into effect an amendment to the Sundry civil service bill was introduced by a congressman from Minnesota with the purpose of putting a stop to the work so admirably begun. Congress passed the amendment. Its object was to put an end to the work of a number of commissions, which had been appointed by the president and whose reports had been simply inaccessible. Among these were the commission for reorganizing the business methods of the government, the public lands commission, the country life commission, and the National conservation commission itself. When I signed the Sundry civil service bill containing this amendment, I transmitted with it as my last official act a memorandum declaring that the amendment was void, because it was an unconstitutional interference with the rights of the executive and that I intended to remain president I would pay to it no attention whatever.

The National conservation commission thereupon became dormant. The suspension of its work came at a most unfortunate time, and there was serious danger that the progress already made would be lost. At this critical moment the National conservation association was organized. It took up the work which otherwise would not have been done, and it exercised a most useful influence in securing the introduction of better conservation measures at the past session of congress and in promoting the passage of wise laws. It deserves the confidence and support of every citizen interested in the development and preservation of our natural resources, and in preventing them from passing into the hands of uncontrolled monopolies. It joins with the National conservation congress in holding this meeting. I am here by the joint invitation of both.

Pan-American Construction.

When the government of the United States awoke to the idea of conservation and saw that it was good, it lost no time in communicating the advantages of the new point of view to its immediate neighbors among the nations. A North American conservation conference was held in Washington, and Canada, Mexico and the United States in the great problem of developing the resources of the continent for the benefit of its people was asked and promised. The nations upon our northern and southern boundaries wisely realized that the great material progress of the future would be based on the development of their natural resources—their forests, their mines, their water, and their soils—will create enormous wealth. It is to the mutual interest of the United States and our sister American republics that the conservation of their natural resources be wisely done. Our manufacturing industries offer a market for more and more of their natural wealth and raw material, while they will increasingly desire to meet that demand in commercial exchange. The more we may from them, the more we shall sell to them. Their prosperity is inseparably involved with our own. Thank heaven, we of this continent are now beginning to realize, what in the end the whole world will realize, that normally it is a good thing for a nation to have its neighbor nations prosper. We of the United States are genuinely and heartily pleased to see growth and prosperity in Canada, in Mexico, in South America.

It is clear that unless the governments of our southern neighbors take steps in the near future by wise legislation to control the development and use of their natural resources, they will probably fall into the hands of concessionaires and promoters, with single purpose, without regard to the permanent welfare of the land in which they work, will be to make the most possible money in the shortest possible time. There will be shameful waste, destructive loss, and short-sighted disregard of the future, as we have learned by bitter experience here at home.

Unless the governments of all the American republics, including our own, enact in time such laws as will both protect their natural wealth and promote their legitimate and reasonable development, future generations will suffer misfortunes to us of today. A great patriotic duty calls upon us. We owe it to ourselves and to them to give the American republics all the help we can. The case in which we have failed should be no less instructive than the cases in which we have succeeded. With prompt action and good will the task of saving the resources for the people is full of hope for us all.

State and Federal Control.

But while we of the United States are anxious, as I believe we are able, to be of assistance to others, there are problems of our own which we must not overlook. One of the most important conservation questions of the moment relates to the control of water power monopoly in the public interest. There is apparent tendency on the part of our opponents to cloud the issue by raising the question of state as against federal jurisdiction. We are ready to meet that issue if it is forced upon us. But there is no hope for the plain people in such conflicts of jurisdiction. The essential question is not one of half-splitting legal technicalities. It is simply this: Who can best regulate the special interests for the public good? Most of the predatory corporations are interstate or have interstate affiliations. Therefore they are largely out of reach of effective state control, and fall of necessity within the federal jurisdiction. One of the prime objects of those among them that are grasping and greedy is to avoid any effective control either by state or nation; and they advocate at this time state control simply because they believe it to be the least effective. In the great fight of the people to drive the special interests from the domination of our government, the nation is stronger and its jurisdiction is more effective than that of any state. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic coast, will be federal laws and the federal executive. That is why I so strongly oppose the demand to turn these matters over to the states. It is fundamentally a demand against the interest of the plain people, of the people of small means, against the interest of our children and our children's children; and it is primarily in the interest of the great corporations which desire to escape all government control.

The Conservation Fight.

On the difficulties in putting into practice the conservation idea is that the field to which it applies is constantly growing in the public mind. It has been no slight task to bring before 100,000 people a great conception like that of conservation, and convince them that it is right. This much we have accomplished. But there remains much to be cleared up, and many misunderstandings to be removed. These misunderstandings are due in part at least to direct misrepresentation by the men to whose interest it is that conservation should not prosper. For example, we find it constantly said by men who should know better, that the temporary withdrawal of such and such tracts of coal lands, will permanently check development. Yet the fact is that these withdrawals have no purpose except to prevent the coal lands from passing into private ownership until congress can pass laws to open them to development under conditions that will do the developing. If there is delay, the responsibility for it rests, not on the men who made the withdrawals to protect the public interest, but on the men who prevent congress from doing wise things, and so putting an end to the need for withdrawals.

Abuses committed in the name of a just cause are familiar to all of us. Many unwise things are done and many unwise measures are advocated in the name of conservation, either by those who believe in the conservation fight, or by those who are not in the movement, but in retarding it. For example, to stop water power development by needless refusal to issue permits for water power or private irrigation works on the public lands in the west, many men, who are conservationists, have been misled in its general principles, to assume that its practical application is necessarily a check upon progress. Nothing could be more mistaken. The idea, widely circulated of late, that conservation means the locking up of the natural resources for the benefit of future generations, is wholly mistaken. Our purpose is to make full use of these resources, but to consider our sons and daughters as well as ourselves; just as a farmer uses his farm in ways to preserve its future usefulness. Conservation is the road to national efficiency, and it stands for ample and wise development.

But in spite of these difficulties, most of which are doubtless inevitable in any movement of this kind, conservation has made marvelous progress, and I have been abroad at the progress made while I was away. We have a right to congratulate ourselves on this marvelous progress; but there is no reason for believing that the fight is won. In the beginning the special interests, who are the chief opponents of the conservation fight, paid little heed to the movement, because they neither understood it, nor saw that if it won they must lose. But with the progress of conservation in the minds of our people the fight is getting sharper. The nearer the victory, the bitterer the opposition that we must meet, and the greater the need for caution and watchfulness. Open opposition we can overcome, but I warn you especially against the men who come to congress, such as the so-called disinterested citizens, but actually as the paid agents of the special interests. I heartily approve the attitude of any corporation, interested in the deliberations of a meeting such as this, which comes hither to advocate its openly admitted interests, and which believes the meeting should have in mind. But I condemn with equal readiness the appearance of a corporate agent before any convention who does not declare himself frankly as such.

This congress is a direct appeal to the patriotism of our entire people. The patriotic citizen, who looks to such gatherings for counsel and leadership. Let that leadership be sound, definite, practical, and on the side of all the people. It would be no small misfortune if a meeting such as this should ever fall into the hands of the open enemies or false friends of the great movement which it represents.

It is our duty and our desire to make this land of ours a better home for the race, but our duty does not stop there. We must also work for better nation, live in a better land. The development and conservation of our national character and our free institutions must go hand in hand with the development and conservation of our natural resources, which the government of our prosperity. Whatever progress we may make as a nation, whatever wealth we may accumulate, however far we may push mechanical development and production, we shall never reach a point where our welfare can depend in the last analysis on anything but honesty, courage, loyalty, and good citizenship. The homely virtues are the lasting virtues, and the road which leads to them is the road to genuine and lasting success.

What this country needs is what every free country must set before it as the great goal toward which it works—an equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for every one of its citizens. To achieve this end we must put a stop to the improper political domination which has been the improper economic dominion, of the great special interests. This country, its natural resources, its natural advantages, its opportunities and its institutions, belong to all its citizens. They must not be enjoyed fully only by a few and freely under government, which the special interests as such have a voice. The supreme political task of our day, the indispensable condition of national efficiency and national welfare, is to drive the special interests out of the public life.

Constipation Cure Free

With the first signs of constipation you resort to the home methods of relief, such as hot or cold water on arising, lots of stewed fruit with your breakfast, etc., but what do you do when these fail?

The majority then start on salts and purgative waters, then change to cathartic pills, etc. If you have gone through these various remedies, you know they are all useless, so far as permanent results go. Now you should try just once again, but try something practical and sensible, a remedy made and intended for the purpose you are trying to accomplish. Such a remedy, as thousands can testify, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is guaranteed to be permanent in its results. Its ingredients are such that by brief use of it the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to again do their work normally, so that in the end you can do away with medicines of all kinds. That it will do this Mr. G. Y. Dodson of Sanville, Va., will gladly attest, and so will Mrs. S. A. Hampton of Portage, O.

To those who are still skeptical there is a way to prove these assertions without a penny of expense: Simply send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and obtain a free sample bottle. After using it, if you are then convinced it is the remedy you need, buy a fifty cent or one dollar bottle of your druggist and continue to use it for a brief time until cured. The directions are simple and the dose is small. It is pleasant to the taste, does not gripe and is promptly effective, and these statements are guaranteed or money will be refunded.

This remedy is over a quarter of a century old and is personally taken by more druggists than any other similar remedy on the American market. Because of its effectiveness, purity and pleasant taste it is the ideal laxative remedy for children, women and old folks generally. Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card, otherwise, for either request the doctor's address in Dr. W. Entered as second-class matter February 10th 1879 at the postoffice at Marion, Kentucky, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

One Dollar the Year in Advance.

Card From Hon. Jno. W. Blue

To the voters of Crittenden county:

I am a candidate for the office of county Judge, subject to your approval and I shall greatly appreciate your support if you deem me worthy. On account of the limited time before the election I will not have an opportunity of seeing you all and take this method of announcing my candidacy.

J. W. BLUE.

Notwithstanding the order to keep children at home and the small attendance at Sunday school, the collection at the M. E. Sunday school with but 70 present, was above $8.00 and at the Baptist church with so much to thank God for at home, good

Bro. Miller reminded his flock that he thought a donation in order for missions and in but a few minutes $155.05 was raised, and this was after this same congregation had recently raised more than $500.00 for the same purpose.

Mrs. J. G. Thurman of near Fredonia who was removed to Walkers Sanitarium at Evansville last week, at which place she underwent a very difficult operation in which one third of her stomach was removed, is reported improving rapidly. This information comes from Dr. Walker to Dr. T. Atchison Frazer of this city.

The Kentucky Cumberland Presbyterian Synod met here last week from which our town has received benefits in more ways than one. In the coming together of so large a body of consecrated men and women, ministers and laymen, from all parts of the state there are many lessons to be learned and one can have a better idea of what the religious world for Christ's sake is doing and bearing witness to their work, but fits us the better for living the remainder of our lives. Every town should be proud to invite the convening of all such religious bodies and the best welcome you can give them is but small pay for the good you get out of it and the reward it brings in after years.

When epidemics strike a town the inhabitants are usually slow to believe it and yet just as slow in trying to suppress it, and worst of all, when the health officer issues an order or authorizes a quarantine, instead of meeting with the approval of all his order and power to prevent the spread of the fatal or loathsome disease is checked and he is condemned instead of praised. This is not right for surely the health officer has the best interest of his town at heart and every citizen should back him up. Just notice if you will, when ever the citizens of a town stand by their health officer, how quick the disease is stamped out as in the case of Dr. Frazers order last Thursday. Had he not issued his order and had the people failed to heed it, it is natural to believe the dread diptheria might have entered several homes with fatal results.

While Sunday night was hallowe'en on account of the Holy day and the church going habit of our citizens, the spooks put off their roaming until Monday night. Even to those who had been sufficiently burdened with the toils of the day to feel to want to go to their rest early, could see in the very air and from the moaning of the wind, that goblins fair as well as demons damned, would in all probability leave their several footprints in the many streets and the magic wand would be wielded in front of many homes before they melted away in the smoke and vapor at the approach of the hour when the great spook called them to their rest. And they were not wrong, for early as eight-thirty, Marshall Cannan as well as many others could see spirits flitting from place to place and that from the sounds emanating from Foh's novelty store, "The Mine" and the shapes and vis-ages in transit, things would be enacted that were Poe to come back from the spirit world he would see food for a poem that would put the "Raven" forever on the shelf. There is a strangeness about how things will act on this particular night. How out houses will turn over, farm implements and old wagons in front of blacksmith shop waiting for repair will get a move on themselves, gates jump off their hinges summer chairs climb telephone poles, family ponies, cats and dogs, except bull dogs, change their color and how an old wheat drill that only a pair of the best farm horses could induce to move would be seen roaming around on Main street, and seated on the seat box a number of spookies singing "We went go home 'till morning." But such is Hallowe'en and such it has been to our dear fathers and mothers and if an old wagon should get so gay as to jump on top of a house, it is nothing more than used to happen in the days of the long ago.

FAMILY REUNION.

A grand family reunion was held in honor of Rev. W. R. Gibbs sixty-ninth birthday at the home of W. R. Gibbs, Junior. Brother Gibbs's children made it known among themselves that they would entertain their father by surprising him with a birthday dinner each one furnishing their part to make the day enjoyable and it is needless to say it was well done. The writer feels almost like one of the children having lived with the family in past years knowing Bro. Gibbs as a brother as a christian gentlemen as father always pointing to higher power for sustenance for true manhood.

Bro. Gibbs is one of leading missionary Baptist ministers of the Ohio Valley Association, he has been preaching thirty seven years, has served thirty three churches, is sixty-nine years young as he calls it and he proved it to the guests on this eventful occasion. Bro. Gibbs has four children living: namely—W. R. Gibbs Jr. married Miss Emma Hughes, daughter of Wm. Hughes, Annie Stephenson wife of Rush Stephenson, Mary Lottie Ralston wife of Edwin Ralston and Florence Brasier wife of Clint Brasier. Bro. Gibbs has thirteen grand-children and they were all present at the reunion with a number of friends and relatives.

After the extension table was extended to an enormous length then filled with good things to numerous to mention, you could hear the children say I wonder why Pa don't come? wonder what is the matter, seeming to forget all that were present in their anxiety for Pa to arrive. By and by old trusty Ned was seen far down the lane, as he neared his destination the shout went up yonder comes Pa till he and his wife (who added much pleasure to the occasion) were seated at the table. Then it was whispered I wonder what Pa will say and if you never heard true thanks offered at a table you should have been with us when Pa poured out his heart to God for thanks to his children and for the good things they had set before him, the silent tears that stole down his cheeks were proof that God was in the occasion. After dinner was served to the hearts content of all that were present, we repaired to the family room and engaged in general conversation each one expressing theirself as a day long to be remembered. When time came to part Rev. C. S. Gregston of Dawson Spring's was asked to read a lesson from the scripture which he did, reading from the 60th psalm, commenting upon this and some quotations from the 23 psalm which was very appropriate for the occasion after which Rev. J. C. Kinsolven lead in prayer and one united petition went up to God that Bro. Gibbs birthdays may be numbered over and over again and that Gods blessing might rest up-on him and his family and that they may all unite in the family reunion above.

Have Faith in Yourself. There is a tremendous power in the habit of expectancy, the conviction that we shall realize our ambition, that our dreams shall come true. There is no uplifting habit like that attitude of expecting that our heart yearnings will be matched with realities; that things are going to turn out well and not ill; that we are going to succeed; that no matter what may or may not happen, we are going to be happy, says Success.

There is nothing else so helpful as the carrying of this optimistic, expectant attitude—the attitude which always looks for and expects the best, the highest, the happiest—and never allowing oneself to get into the pessimistic, discouraged mood.

Believe with all your heart that you will do what you were made to do. Never for an instant harbor a doubt of this. Drive it out of your mind if it seeks entrance. Entertain only the friendly thoughts or ideals of the thing you are bound to achieve. Reject all thought enemies, all discouraging moods—everything which would even suggest failure or unhappiness.

Wasted Effort.

It is said that a California poet was badly handled by his wife because he neglected to support the family.

When they asked for bread he gave them a bonnet, and when they clamored for pie he came across with a madrigal.

Nevertheless, it doesn't seem quite right for his wife to reach over and snatch tufts from his cranium cover and batter his shins with benchmark shoes and crack his slats with a broom handle. That sort of treatment doesn't bring results. A poet with a black eye and a twisted neck and a dented kneecap is no more useful than a poet in perfect order.

What the lady should do would be to have her poet hubby pick up some side trade that would promise financial results—as they did in Indiana, where you will find the baker writes poetry and so do the hairdresser and the motorman and the bartender. But there is no use attempting to club money out of a poet.

AN IDEAL MAN AND HOW MADE

A Paper Read Before A Great Holiness Meeting at Meridian, Miss. by Dr. Besire.

When God made man He made him with a threefold nature—body, mind and spirit, capable of untold development. The ideal man is one that has all three of his natures developed in the proper way and proper proportion. It is a presumption to think that we are prepared for life with only one side of our nature developed and trained. The ideal man is one that has the highest possible development of spirit, mind and body.

God has given us the ideal in Adam and in Christ, the second Adam, and although the Devil has marred man and dragged him down, yea through the second Adam, Christ, we can be lifted up, even through the world, modern education and the Devil are against us, the word of God and Christ is sufficient. God has said, "Train up a child in the way it shall go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." There is no place like the home for the laying of the foundation of character in a human life. It is there that a child's first and most lasting impressions are made. There he finds or ought to find, the material out of which he begins to build his ideals and conceptions of life. The child comes into this world knowing less and more helpless than any creature on earth and is dependent upon its parents will and instructions for its preparation it should have to meet the responsibilities and duties of life. To assert that because a child is human, and it must of necessity be turned over to the powers of evil, and be allowed to run the course, and sow its wild oats is an insult to God, and a cowardly shirking of responsibility.

Why not from the beginning surround the child with the thought of God, and a holy atmosphere.

Next to the Christian home in training a child and making the ideal man, is the Christian school. Education has been the main problem of all religious education is the development of the whole man. It is this point that the Christian school must accomplish, if it realizes the purpose for which it exists. While its distinctive aim is commonly thought to be, so far as a religious instruction is concerned, the training simply of the spiritual nature, it is nevertheless true that the life in a Christian college should lead the student to co-ordinate and develop uniformly all the departments of his being. It should furnish him lofty ideals and exalted inspiration in the three fold life that he lives. He should rejoice in the innocent games on the play grounds, in the exercises of the class room and debating societies, and in those of the Bible class and prayer meeting, as all being legitimate sources of strength and power.

The Christian ideal should be permeated and include his entire school life, and all that he does should be essentially in making up his religious experience and establishing him in true holiness.

First we will consider his spiritual development. Perhaps if I were arranging this in strictly climatical order, this phase of Christian education should be reserved for the last, but I believe in the view point of the great teacher, heart education is the basis, foundation, the solid granite, on which the other structure should be built, Solomon said, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge. The work of a Christian college is to first introduce its pupils to Christ who will forgive their actual sins and cleans away their vent to sinning, filling them with the Holy Spirit, and develop its pupils to Christian living. A school may uphold religion in its class room, its management and in its prayer meeting, and be ever so tenacious or orthodox teaching, and yet be a nursery of due deceit and hypocrisy. This should be a matter to engage the most earnest and intelligent thought of the authorities of every Christian school. The administrative officers and faculty should study the problem of the Christian life of the student body as carefully as that curriculum or requirements for entrance of graduation. The spirit of Christian should be characteristic of the entire life of the college. The Holy Spirit should be so felt in the place, until it should be as the sunlight that falls caressingly upon the mountain top and on the meadow, and that slips silently into the nooks and corners, and that glides in at doorways and through windows, and that steals in through the cracks of the walls and roof. This Christian spirit should fill the whole social life of the school, even as the sweet perfume fills the garden of roses. It should be so vital a thing in the hearts of the college family, as to be the source of a living flow of character that refreshes and enlivens all the intellectual, social and spiritual life of the institution. It need not be, it must not be, a thing dogmatically taught by some saint professor in the so-called religious department but it must be the vital breath, the all filling, all inspiring atmosphere in the midst of which the students body shall move and from which it shall breathe in the power of an eternal life to this end, the Great Book, splendid collection of books, the most marvelous on earth living books, must be intelligently appreciated, and talked, and studied and lived. In fact, God should be put first.

In fact God should be put first in the whole college life, and the student should be urged, first to get God enthroned in their hearts to help them search for truth, and sift out the error and keep in the straight and narrow path while they are getting an education, and to prepare them in after life to be a living example of what Christ can do for a surrendered life.

Second, on the other hand the students should have a high intellectual training, counteracting the idea that there is any conflict between the highest education of the head and the deepest culture of the heart. Education is a subject upon which Christian people need to be aroused. Of all people that should have a liberal education is the man with a pure heart. One reason there has been so much reproach brought upon the Holiness movement, is that we have had a goal without knowledge, and while our hearts have been right, we have made many mistakes with the head and driven a great many good people away from us and our Christ. It is not enough to have the truth and to present the truth, but we must present the truth in the proper way. Many times people have gone away from our meeting and criticised us and not accepted the truth, not on account of the truth, but because it was presented in an offensive way. This can be illustrated by a very common illustration, and that is in the matter of food. We may buy the best and purest of groceries, but if we prepare it in a bad way, burn it, scorch it, and serve it in a very unattractive way, it makes us lose our appetite for it. So it is with the truth of God, and we as servants, ought to be careful as to how we present the truth and represent Christ. We ought to present it in the best language possible, in the best manner possible and make it as attractive as possible, and nothing will aid us more in this than true education. Those of us who are past the age of receiving a college education, can learn a great deal by observing those who have received education and studying cultured people, and the rules of etiquette, and try to present the truth in as refined and acceptable manner as possible. The Bible instructs us to be courteous, and who was more gentle and kind and thoughtful of the feeling of others than Jesus Christ, when he was on earth. When I think of how many blunders we make, and how we mar the truth in the way we present it, it makes me want to go down before my Christ in humility, and sit at his feet until I can absorb some of gentleness, kindness and loveliness. Because we have the truth and Christ is enthroned in our hearts, it doesn't give us licence to ruthlessly crush the feeling of others, and break the rule of common etiquette, but on the other hand, it should make us more gentle and thoughtful of others. Bearish ways never attract but repel. You never knew of anyone taking as a pet a bear, but you have the lamb, and when people criticise us, let's us notice and see if it is not because we are bearish instead of the truth of Holiness we are presenting. This doesn't mean to compromise in the least. I believe we can be just as true to God and do more good by first getting a pure heart and the higher culture of the head and body.

Third, is physical development. Athletics in most of our colleges are so brutal and have been degraded so until most Christian people have an aversion of it. Nevertheless, it is true that the youth must have an outlet, and we must have some form of athletics for physical development in our Christian schools. This can be done by introducing innocent games, and having systematic games, and having systematic training of systematic, exercises etc., Our education should not be unnatural. It should trend all the natural forces toward God and develop them to the highest perfection.

My prayer is that we as Holiness people, may catch the inspiration from Christ, and develop our whole beings to the highest possible state, so that we may be our best for Christ, and come nearer his ideal in the deepest spirituality of the heart, the broader education of the head, and highest development and culture of body.

CURING CATARRH

Accept Our Advice and Try This Remedy at Our Risk

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. The mucous membrane is, one may say, the interior lining of the body. Catarrh therefore may exist in any part of the system.

When the catarrhal poison attacks the mucous membrane, inflammation and congestion are produced and nature fails to throw off the accumulated poison. The organ which has been afflicted ceases to perform its proper function as nature intended it should. The result is, complication upon complication, which may lead to other even more serious afflictions.

We honestly believe Rexall Mucu-Tone will do wonders toward overcoming catarrh. It is made from the prescription of an eminent physician who made a long study of catarrh, and his great success with this remedy was an enviable one. We want you if you are a sufferer from catarrh in any form, give Rexall Mucu-Tone a thorough trial. Use it with regularity and persistency for a reasonable time, then if you are not satisfied, come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every cent you paid us. This is certainly the fairest offer that any one could make and should attest our sincerity of purpose. It comes in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain it only at—The Rexall Store. Haynes & Taylor.

Cheap Imitation

Owing to the immense sale and popularity of Dr. Bell's Pine Tar-Honey there are many cheap imitations on the market under similar sounding names, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the bell on the bottle.

"I wish to say that I have used Sloan's Liniment on a lame leg that has given me much trouble for six months. It was so bad that I couldn't walk sometimes for a week. I tried doctors' medicine and had a rubber bandage for my leg, and bought everything that I heard of, but they all did me no good, until at last I was persuaded to try Sloan's Liniment. The first application helped it, and in two weeks my leg was well."—A. L. HUNTER, of Hunter, Ala.

THE C. P. SYNOD OF KENTUCKY

Had Most Profitable Meeting in More than One Hundred Years of its History.

When the gavel in the hands of Moderator, the Rev. D. W. Fooks, of Paducah, fell for the last time at 12 o'clock Thursday night it was the signal for the adjournment of one of the greatest and most successful Synods ever held in Kentucky.

The coming together of this great body of highly recognized Christian works, belonging to a congregation born one hundred years ago in the light of a Southern sun in our beautiful Southland, was not only enjoyed and profitable to themselves, but, by every truly Christian man or woman in Marion. And not only was the whole intelligent body in high favor and recognition by Marion and her proud citizens, but by God himself as shown from the great blessings they were permitted to enjoy.

Everything and everybody was in harmony from start to finish and from the time good Bro. J. L. Price the retiring Moderator called the Synod to order on Tuesday evening in the Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock, until the gavel in the hands of his worthy successor fell at midnight Thursday night, peace and good will prevailed.

The doors of the Methodist and Baptist churches were thrown wide open to the visitors as freely as were all the homes of all denominations of Marion and so far as any one knew, there was nothing left undone that would add to the pleasure and comfort of the visitors. Nor did they a Synodic body fail in appreciation for the high recognition accorded them. Hon. Jno. W. Blue, of the Southern Presbyterian church, who had been invited to address the body in behalf of the city, Hon. Allie C. Moore on the part of the Bar, Rev. Arthur Mather D. D. of the Methodist church on the part of the Ministry, Rev. M. E. Miller, and N. E. Calmes were unanimously voted a seat in their body.

Quirey, I. F. Threlkeld, and J. W. Gahagan.

Sorry are we that on account of separate meetings, the clever Stated clerk Bro. McEuen, failed to give us the names of all the precious women of which there were a great number and really the best enjoyed part of the meeting was in their various departments.

Mrs. T. A. Smithson of Hopkinsville, who is President of the Women Synodic Missionary Society is a bright able woman and presiding so ably over such an intelligent body made the meeting a love feast for all. Mrs. M. L. Woosley, of Caneyville, who has a wide reputation as one of the greatest Christian characters in Kentucky Synod as a Missionary, made a touching address to a large audience of appreciative listeners Wednesday.

Mrs. Johnnie Massie Clay, of Bowling Green, Editor of the Women's work of the Cumberland Presbyterian Banner made many friends while here by her devotion to her work and business like way in which she handles it.

Mrs. N. S. West, of Hopkinsville, Recording Secretary of the Synodic Missionary Society, was another of the prominent women of the Kentucky Synod, whose knowledge of her work and her duty endears her to all who come in contact with her.

Mrs. Edna Perry, of Hopkinsville, the retiring Treas., so endeared herself in the hearts of the people that when the parting hour arrived she was among the most highly complimented woman of the Synod.

Miss Mattie McNary, of Greenville, Treasurer of the Synodic Missionary Society, of Owensboro, made herself popular here as true Christian character and for her ability to fill the high office entrusted to her.

Mrs. D. W. Fooks, of Paducah Secy., Treas., of the Synodic Board of Missions, was so conversant with her duties and so thoroughly competent to fill this important office that the success of the Cumberland Presbyterian church is not wondered at when such noble women are in charge of affairs. And be it known that while her husband is one of the best Moderators ever wielding a gavel, she is just as competent to fill the highest place in the gift of the church.

Miss Charlie Poulware, of Owensboro, one of the most pleasant young women in the whole Synod, distinguished herself and her Presbytery by giving for Missions more than any other in the State.

Mrs. M. L. Clemens, of Hopkinsville, wife of one of the most prominent and popular ministers in the state and who has so faithfully served her church for three and a half years as a Missionary in Japan, was very entertaining in her stories of the great work in progress there.

Mrs. E. J. Puryear, President of the Owensboro Presbyterial Society, is another of the great noble women who have consecrated their lives to the Master's service.

Miss Dovie Winfree of Hopkinsville, a bright, sweet young Christian read a paper before the body on: "What hast thou done," that brought forth words of praise from all who heard it.

Miss Bettie Davis of Sturgis, Miss Nellie Martin, of Utica, Mr. and Mrs. G. Simpson of Sturgis, Mrs. Goodman of Bowling Green, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Quirey, G. B. Simpson, Sr., J. Y. Simpson and Carrol Welch, of Sturgis were pleasant visitors at the Synod.

All the churches were taxed to their capacity with interested listeners during all the services.

ELK and CROWN FLOUR

She will insist on having these brands and no other. Why do some of the leading millers of Kentucky say that of all the different brands of flour, they come in competition with, "The best is made by the Marion Milling Co." This is easily explained. The quality of Crittenden county wheat cannot be excelled, an up-to-date mill, a miller who knows how and whose ambition is to make the highest quality flour on the market, easily places us in the front ranks of the leading mills in Kentucky.

A CARD OF THANKS

To my many friends who so loyally supported me in the Record-Press contest, I desire to publicly express my appreciation; while I was not successful in winning the first prize, I know I could never have fully appreciated these many warm friends had I not entered this contest. The constant support you gave me from the first and the many cheering words I received from you through the many weeks of the contest will always be fresh in my memory; and in your friendship, I feel that I have won a prize more valuable and more enduring than the one offered in the contest.

To the editor of the Record-Press, and the judges who made the various counts, I desire to thank you for your kind and fair treatment; I know the contest was fair in every respect and I am perfectly satisfied with the result. Again I wish to thank every one who in any way assisted me in this contest, and to assure one and all that I have but the kindest feelings for all.

Very gratefully,

RESOLUTIONS.

We the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Marion Kentucky feel very much under obligations to the good people of Marion for their kindness and liberality and brotherly helpfulness in aiding us to care for the annual session of the Kentucky Synod of our church.

These occasions sometimes over-tax the hospitality of the smaller towns. However in this instance offers of entertainment came from one and all and there was plenty of room and to spare.

We desire to return our thanks in this public manner, remembering especially the Methodist brethren for the use of their church and the Record-Press for the use of its columns.

TOBACCO TIDINGS

The District Board of the Stemming Association adjourned Tuesday afternoon, November 1, and the several members returned to their homes. Supplementing much routine work was the inspection and classifying of samples from all the counties, and more important than all else, the setting of the price on the 1910 crop.

Each committeeman saw for the first time samples from counties other than his own, and all the committeemen while not surprised, were much pleased to find fully borne out, by the samples from all the counties, confirmation of the prevalent high estimate of the extraordinary excellence of the 1910 crop.

Committeemen are unanimously of the opinion that crops are the best in ten years, or as one of the committee expressed it, in the presence of two others, "it is the equal of the best crop produced in the past twenty-five years."

The committee unanimously settled on the price of $8.00 per hundred average for the 1910 crop.

Crittenden Record-Press
Marion, Ky., Nov. 17, 1910.

S. M. JENKINS Editor and Publisher.

Entered as second-class matter February 2nd at the postoffice at Marion, Kentucky, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

One Dollar the Year in Advance.

Blackford the enterprising city in Webster County, near our boundaries, is to vote Friday Dec. 2nd, on the question of establishing a graded school, and levying an ad valorem tax of 50 cts. and a poll tax of $1.50.

This is a move in the right direction and we trust the next will be to vote right and establish the school.

The election of J. W. Blue as County Judge, meets with approval and puts Mr. Blue in the line of promotion. A man who is popular enough to carry his home county by one hundred and forty majority when it is normally four hundred the other way, undoubtedly has the confidence of his own people and it certainly knocks out the old saying that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country." We think Mr. Blue would make fine Governorial timber. We regard him the equal mentally, of any man who has occupied that chair within the last decade and as a matter of justice Western Kentucky is entitled to a governor. Ollie James has done work enough in all sections of Kentucky for democratic party, to feel free to ask at the hand of the next democratic state convention that the nomination for governor be given his home county, especially when he could offer the name of one so capable and with all so honest as J. W. Blue.

still its President. He has not sought political preferment until the new state of Oklahoma was formed when he was urged to enter the race for the nomination for Governor. He was defeated in that race by Haskell but the people have shown by the great and complimentary vote, given him in the election just had, that they are glad of an opportunity to correct that mistake. Mr. Cruce has achieved what of success is his, unaided by wealth except of his own energy and native ability have been strongly assisted by his brothers who have all stood loyally by him in all his ambitions. Will and Cavitt made speeches and Laurence and Lave worked too, so reports have it. From the Ardmore we clip the following:

WILL CRUCE AS A POLITICIAN

Will Cruce, good old honest Will Cruce, has come back from a campaign of the western counties of a state. Will Cruce looks to be very much at home in the Sunday School, it seems natural to see him engaged in the trial of the most perplexing lawsuits that come up in the state, he seems most natural when addressing a jury of farmers, but in our imagination we can scarcely conceive just how he looks at campaigning the State. He tells his hearers that he is no politician and he is not. He never so much as dreamed out in his mind any vote catching scheme, much less attempted to put one into execution. But those who have heard him, say his logic is unanswerable. He goes at his crowd in rather an easy manner at first, his looks betray his absolute honesty and he does not stand before a crowd for one minute until the crowd is willing to take his word upon any question. And when the confidence and the enthusiasm of the crowd begins to reflect itself in the attitude of the speaker, Will Cruce becomes eloquent with his logic and home-spun expressions and it is said that no man in the state has done more effective work in the campaign than Will Cruce. And during the entire campaign he has arranged his speaking dates so that he could be with his Sunday school except upon one occasion and that was caused by a late train which forced him to change his schedule. Will Cruce is not at all seriousness, but there is a funny side to his make up and he enjoys fun as much as any one else.

On his return trip he tells this story on A. C. Cruce. "At Hobart" he says, "I had the smallest crowd of any place I spoke. Whenever Will Cruce was announced in the circulars, good crowds came, but when I arrived at Hobart the first thing that greeted my eyes was a circular announcing that A. C. Cruce was to speak there that afternoon. Well, I knew the jig was up then, and sure enough that was the smallest crowd I had." He tells the story where A. C. can hear it and he finds a great deal of sport in teasing his brother.

When Will Cruce gets to one side where A. C. can't hear him he says really he had the biggest crowd at Hobart because he spoke there on a Saturday afternoon when all the farmers were in town, but he would not have A. C. know for it any reasonable sum.

A great reception was tendered the Governor elect at Ardmore his home and many speakers vied with each other in landing the name of "honest conservative and unsullied Lee Cruce. The Ardmore closes the lengthy account of this reception as follows:

Amid the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," Hon. Lee Cruce then stepped upon the stage, and for fully five minutes the air reverberated with the thunders of applause which greeted him and when the band broke into Dixie about half of the audience leaped to their feet and pandemonium reigned again. Quiet was finally restored and Mr. Coleman introduced Mr. Cruce.

Mr. Cruce thanked his home people for the splendid reception and stated that after he had completed his stewardship to the people of the state of Oklahoma that he would return to them and spend the remaining years of his life in Ardmore.

A New Idea In Food Flavors

Made by an improved process, which not only represents a saving of about 80 per cent. in cost, but a distinct gain in quality. An opportunity to explain fully, when I call at your homes will be appreciated. Respectfully,

OUR SILENT CITY

Any one who does not go often to the New Marion cemetery would be astonished at the improvements there, as well as the great care and attention given the last resting place of those beloved ones who have gone on before. Some of the recent evidences of remembrance, of those who lie buried there are of such handsome proportions as to demand more than passing notice. The last resting place of the beloved Dixon is now marked by a massive red granite slab and a Barrie granite monument, inscribed with name and dates of birth and death. The lot is surrounded with Indiana bleached stone. It all is in keeping with his modest life, elegant, refined unassuming. Mrs. Dixon spared neither money nor trouble in searching for memorials to please her taste. Green Johnson did the work.

Mrs. M. M. Wilson has had one of the handsomest memorials in the cemetery put up in the "Wilson Circle" to the memory of her husband. It has been said that no monument of marble could be lasting enough or high enough to be commensurate with the deeds of this good man, who in his 80 years of usefulness, and right living, did kindness to every one who came in touch with him. He took the lead and lent substantial aid to every enterprise in his palmy days and future generations will have his life and example to emulate when looking on the neat and beautiful monument marking his grave. Henry Bros. of this city were the contractors.

Will of John J. Nunn.

The will of the late John J. Nunn, of Sullivan, disposing of an estate of $20,000.00 has been probated at Morganfield.

The will provides first that all of the deceased's just debts be paid.

It bequeaths to Mrs. Fannie Nunn, wife the deceased, the home dwelling and ten acres of land during her life. At her death to go to the three children.

He gives to his wife absolutely all of his horses, cows, sunn, wagon and household and kitchen furniture. To his children by his first wife, Mary and Huston, he gives the store building and lot in Sullivan.

The life insurance of $3,000 is to be equally divided between his wife and five children.

All other property, consisting one-half interest in the Nunn Bros. stock of merchandise, notes, accounts and cash is to be divided as follows:

One-third to his wife, the other thirds to his five children.

The mercantile business at Sullivan is to be continued as long as the sons find it profitable.

Mrs. Fannie B. Nunn and Geo. Nunn are named as executors.

Mr. Nunn was a brother of Nunn and Mrs. J. N. Boston, of city. His first wife was Squire Black's daughter, Miss Leora

The many friends of the late attorney A. J. Moore will join with much regret of his death at his home on East De- street. He is suffering from a wrench in his back from an accidental fall and he learns he is suffering acutely from it.

Dr. Mather had two large congregations at the Methodist church on Sunday last which were greatly interested in the sermons which he preached.

At three o'clock on Sunday last Dr. Mather preached to a large audience at Hillsdale and his sermon was greatly appreciated. Judge J. G. Rochester accompanied Dr. Mather to his appointment.

ARCHIBALD ULRICH DAVIDSON Archie Davidson, one of the brightest boys Marion has sent out into the big world, was a candidate for floratorial Representative in the district in which his home town, Stigler is located in Oklahoma. The office is similar to State Senator in this State and his friends had great hope that he would win in the race. The latest returns however indicate his defeat by a small majority and the Republicans are claiming that the disfranchisement of the negro had much to do with it. Archie is not the boy to give up though and we feel sure he will be heard from again and his many friends here will expect to see his name written high in the public life of the new state of Oklahoma.

Mrs. G. H. Whitecotton and daughter, Sullivan, Ky., were here Saturday enroute home after a visit to her son, Grover White at Tolu, Ky., and brother Anthony Murphy, near the city.

A GOOD REASON

Marion People Can Tell You
Why It Is So

Doan's Kidney Pills cure the cause of disease, and that is why the cures are always lasting.
This remedy strengthens and tones up the kidneys, helping them to drive out of the body the liquid poisons that cause backache, headache and distressing kidney and urinary complaints, Marion people testify to permanent cures.

Mrs. Mary Alexander, Marion, Ky., says: "I was afflicted with kidney trouble for three or four years. Sharp twinges seized me in my back when I stooped or lifted and I was unable to rest well on account of the constant backache. I tired easily, often felt nervous and languid and was annoyed by headaches and dizzy spells. I was also troubled by a blurring of my eyesight and I noticed that the kidney secretions contained sediment when allowed to stand. I finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Haynes & Taylor's Drug Store and am glad to say that they gave me a great relief. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

WINDY NOV. WEATHER

Rev. Irl Hicks is dishing out the worst yet for November and it would be well for those who have not done so to lay in a supply of fuel and be ready for a general mixup of kinds of weather.

A regular storm period is certain on the 19th, covering 17th, to 22nd. The indications are that little intermission of fair weather will appear between this and the preceding period.
This will likely cause a prolonged spell of threatenig weather, increasing into renewed storms of rain and snow on and touching the 19th, 20th and 21st. On the heels of these storms the barometer will rise and change to much colder weather, with gales to come out of the northwest.

A reactionary storm period is rall on the 23rd, 24th, and 15th.
Low barometer, higher temperature, with possible lightning, thunder rain, on the 26th. Rising barometer and change to colder will come promptly behind the storms. The month goes central on the 23, 24 and 25. Low storm period.

Fine Wheat

We are now grinding as fine a quality of wheat as

The flour that we are making from this wheat cannot be excelled. This month and next is the time to lay in your year's supply. Why not lay in what you may need for the next 6 or 12 months while the price is right and roads good? If de-positors will bring barrels we will pack same free of Shall Women Vote?

If they did, millions would vote Dr. King's New Life Pills

banishing dull, fagged feelings.
Backache or headache, constipation, dispelling colds, imparting appetite and toning up the system, they're unequalled. Easy,

BOUGHT GASOLINE TO PUT ON MOTHER'S PICKLES

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 16.—
The small son of Mrs. Lewis Boekel is assured an unpleasant session with his mother. Mrs.
Boekel sent the boy to the grocery store yesterday to get some vinegar to make some pickles.
The lad brought back gasoline instead. Mrs. Boekel poured the gasoline over the pickles on a hot stove. Flames filled her kitchen and the house caught fire. She seized the pickle pot and ran out of doors with it throwing the contents in the next yard and setting fire to the house next door. The firemen turned a stream on the two houses and the pickle pot. The small son has not yet appeared.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Alkey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible.
I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine.
Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge.
Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.
